Rabbi's Reflections

Friends With Life

BY RABBI LINA ZERBARINI

The New Year approaches! I offer you and yours the traditional blessing: May you be written in the Book of Life for a good year. May you and yours have life, and health, and peace – all good things.

As we wish for joy and ease in the coming year, we know there will be other experiences as well. For me and for Dinah, as for most of you, the past year has brought, as all do, joys and sorrows, love and loss. Life itself is made of all these things. But the hard things tend to be unexpected and feel out of the ordinary. When going through difficult times, people often hope that life “will get back to normal.”

Actually, it is normal that people get sick, and even death is just as normal as birth. These things happen to all living things. But that does not make them easy. We want ourselves and our loved ones to feel and be well, and it is upsetting when we and they do not.

How do we respond to the hard times? Often, in our fear and anger and sadness – all normal responses – we struggle with the reality in front of us, and fight with life.

Buddhist tradition teaches that suffering is caused by two things: attachment and aversion. When we are attached, when we want things to be a certain way and they are not, we suffer. And when we feel aversion, when we do not like a situation or a feeling and defend ourselves against it, we suffer. This is not to suggest that we can avoid pain. It is inevitable. But our attempts to push away what is happening can make our experience even harder.

...it is normal that people get sick, and even death is just as normal as birth...

Jewish, Buddhist, and meditation teacher Sylvia Boorstein offers an amazing kavannah/intention: “I greet this moment in friendship with an undefended heart.” Rabbi Shefa Gold adds to this kavannah a verse from Song of Songs: זֶה דּוּדִי וְזֶה רֵעִי / Zeh dodi v'zeh re'i – this is my beloved, and this is my friend (5:16). This: this experience, this situation, this sensation. We meet each of them as my beloved, my friend.

I have been thinking of this chant in my preparation for the upcoming Days of Awe. What if we said: this is my beloved, this is my friend, in response to the moments of my day, whether welcome or not? How would that impact our experience? And what if we entered the New Year with

Meet the President: Isabel Zinman

I'd like to introduce myself as I begin my role as your new president. First, I would like to tell you how I joined Kehillath Shalom Synagogue. I learned about KSS on my own, without referrals from friends or family. My brother, Henry, lives in California and told me about the Reconstructionist synagogue that he belongs to and thought that the ideology would be a good fit for me. I knew from living in the neighborhood that there was a Reconstructionist synagogue nearby. So last year, I decided to stop by for a visit. It happened to be on the only day of the week that our office secretary, Pam Fosella, was available to open the door for me. Little did I know that I'd feel so at home and develop a passion for this little shul. I guess you'd say that it was meant to be.

The first thing I remember saying was, "There are so many events offered that I don't know which to attend first." I'm an active member of Bagels & Books, attend Torah study on Saturday mornings, meditate during Morning Gatherings, enjoy Rabbi Lina's Soup Shabbat dinners, and attend almost all of our Shabbat evening candle lighting ceremonies. In March, I accepted the role of Corresponding Secretary. After attending several board meetings, I was asked to be your next president. At first, I was a bit leery. After all, how would the congregants agree to support such a new member as myself to become their new leader?

After much discussion with Rabbi Lina and the board members, I agreed to accept this honorable position. I do come to you with leadership experience. I have served as a Trustee on a temple board, the Vice President of Programming for a Sisterhood, and President of a Sisterhood. I will do my best to be the president that Kehillath Shalom Synagogue deserves.

Now, about my personal life and personality. Jennifer Feldman is my one and only child, who is really an adult and lives in Syosset. My brother, Henry Zinman, lives in California. My 99-year-old mother, Lucille Zinman, lives at the Sunrise Senior Living in nearby Huntington. I'm a retired school librarian and am currently working part time as a librarian at the Syosset Public Library. It's hard to believe that I've been there for almost 36 years. It was my moonlighting job that has now become a supplement to my retirement income.

I must tell you that I'm also a bit clumsy. Therefore, I'm warning you to stand or sit a few feet away from me, if you see me holding a hot or cold beverage! ❖ this approach and with Sylvia Boorstein's intention of greeting moments with friendship and an undefended heart? Perhaps less struggling with the moment might lead to more ease and to openness. These qualities are what I think of as happiness.

In Morning Gathering, which meets Tuesday and Friday mornings at 8, we often chant the first line of "Ashrei," Psalm 145, which is traditionally said three times daily. There is a rabbinic teaching that says that a person who recites Ashrei three times a day is assured a share in the world-to-come.

The rabbis like it because it is an alphabetic acrostic and because it contains the verse: You open your hand and satisfy every living thing. They understood the acrostic to be inclusive, aleph to tav, a – z, and thus incorporating everything we might need or want to pray, plead, and praise. Additionally, the psalm highlights God's sustenance of all life and reminds us of the support and blessings we have.

The line we chant is the first: Happy are those who dwell/sit in your house. This verse invites us to be present, open, and at ease (what I think of as happy) with whatever we are sitting with. Living this way – in friendship with life – gives us our share in "the world-to-come" right here and now. May it be so in the coming year for all of us. Shanah tovah. ❖

Hosted by Reconstructionist Congregations Kehillath Shalom (Huntington, NY), SAJ-Judaism that Stands for All (NYC), Or Haneshamah (Ottawa), Columbia Jewish Congregation (Columbia, MD), and Shaarei Shama-yim (Madison, WI)

Selichot, a service of reflection and prayer, is the official start to the High Holiday season. To help us enter this holy season, prolific Jewish educator Gabrielle Kaplan-Meyer will lead us in a Creative Arts/Expression workshop “Gratitude & Blessings, Joy & Repair.” Through reading poetry and texts, listening to music and responding to art focused on the transition to the New Year, we will have the opportunity to engage in writing and/or collage prompts and exercises to explore our emotions and energy around what we’ve experienced, how we’ve grown and what we hope to repair going forward.

Please note, we believe everyone is creative, whether they see themselves as a poet, artist or none of the above. No prior experience needed and there will be no pressure to share. This space is for you to find an avenue into teshuvah and tikkun (repair) as we approach the holiest days of the year.

The workshop will work well for people of all ages. If you have accessibility needs, please reach out to rachel@saj.nyc. A source sheet with texts will be sent to you ahead of time. For the workshop, please bring a journal/paper and pen for writing and paper, images from magazines or photos, scissors, a glue stick and markers if you’d like to do collage.

Following the workshop, Reconstructionist clergy from the partnering synagogues will lead a song-filled and reflective Selichot service.

WELCOME BACK TO RABBI BRIELLE

We are thrilled to welcome Rabbi Dr. Brielle Paige Rassler back to Kehillath Shalom for the Days of Awe. We congratulate her on her ordination and on the publication of her book: Psalms: A Millennial's Poetic Interpretation. She will share about the book at our Yom Kippur Study Session at 5 pm on Monday, September 25.

Here's a note from Rabbi Brielle:

Hello KSS! I am thrilled to be returning for my third year with your wonderful community. I am grateful to Rabbi Lina for the opportunity to share my recently published book with you all during the Yom Kippur afternoon learning session. Together we will explore the magic and mystery of Psalms. We will dive deep into the ancient Hebrew roots and see how they can be renewed and reinterpreted to serve our unique needs in these unique times. I would love to hear from you if there is a particular Psalm you would like us to explore together. You can reach me directly at Brielle-PaigeRassler@gmail.com.

I am happy to offer a signed copy of Psalms: A Millennial's Poetic Interpretation to Kehillath Shalom Synagogue members and High Holiday guests at a discounted rate, and to include a free copy of both of my albums of liturgical music with each book purchase! These albums include melodies that we have sung together over the years and many new melodies as well. Please follow the link below and select "Kehillath Shalom Synagogue High Holiday Pre-Order." Your book and CDs will be available for pick up on or after Rosh Hashanah.

See you soon, can't wait!

Caring & Sharing

Our deepest condolences are extended to Alan Wachtel and Heidi, Beverly, David, and Adam and their families on the recent passing of Inez. A long-time member of KSS, Inez was also a member of Temple Beth El. May you be comforted among the mourners of Zion and Jerusalem and may you know no more sorrow.

We are saddened also by the recent loss of former KSS member Evelyn Botkin. A Founding Member, Evelyn served as Chair of the Education, Ritual, Long-Range Planning and Social Action Committees, and created and led Contemplative Shabbat services for several years. She was honored by the Jewish Reconstructionist Foundation for her contributions to the Jewish community. Our deepest condolences are extended to Naomi, Josh, Brad, and Dianne and their families on her loss. May you be comforted among the mourners of Zion and Jerusalem and may you know no more sorrow. ❖

Bagels & Books Visits The Jewish Museum

On August 3, a contingent of Bagels & Bookies went to The Jewish Museum to see the exhibit, The Sassoons, in connection with the book The Last Kings of Shanghai, which we read in April, 2022. The exhibit, which has since closed, was extremely interesting and informative, and the docent for our tour was excellent. On display were ritual objects such as Torah covers, Haggadot, spice boxes, Megillat, and more; family portraits, and objets d'art collected by various members of the family. We also enjoyed seeing some of the other exhibits at the museum, and hope to repeat a similar outing one day.

Thanks to BARBARA KREMEN for promoting the visit, to LOIS HASS and ARLENE FELL for driving, to BARBARA, ARLENE, and LIZ SABO for getting library passes to the museum, and to VICKI SCHWARTZ, whose friend gave her four guest passes. We had enough passes to cover everyone's admission! And we enjoyed a lovely late lunch afterward at Island, just around the corner from the museum.

bagels & books

Our Bagels & Books group gathered twice over the summer to choose our selections for the coming, first going through initial suggestions over lunch at the Clubhouse at The Hamlet, facilitated by Dolores Weinberg, and then making our final choices over an abundant lunch buffet hosted by Liz Sabo at her home. Thanks to Dolores and Liz!

We will start on September 10 with The Words of My Father, by Yousef Bashir. In this moving, candid, and transformative memoir, a Palestinian-American activist recalls his adolescence in Gaza during the Second Intifada, and how he made a strong commitment to peace in the face of devastating brutality. The book gives us a very different view of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict from what most of us are familiar with.

The rest of the list, culled from a plethora of choices and after some spirited discussion is:

October 15 — The List, by Ayelet Gundar-Goshen

November 19 — Departure Stories, by Elisa Bernick

December 17 — The Dressmakers of Prospect Heights, by Kitty Zeldis

January 21 — The Prime Ministers [Menachem Begin], by Yehuda Avner

February 18 — The Thread Collectors, by Shaunna J. Edwards and Alyson Richman

March 17 — Catskill Culture, by Phil Brown

April 14 — The Living and the Lost, by Ellen Feldman

May 19 — The American Way, by Bonnie Siegler and Helene Stapinski

June 23 — Signal Fires, by Dani Shapiro

We hope to return to all in-person meetings this year, with Zoom available. Watch TWAKS and your email for further info, and please join us for any and all books that interest you (coming just once is fine!), as well as for bagels, lox, coffee, and other goodies, as well as stimulating discussion on a Sunday morning. ❖

Torah Portion: Ki Tavo, Deuteronomy 26:1 – 29:8

The laws of tithing and first fruits are discussed. The people are told if they obey God's commandments, they will receive every blessing, but if they do not, many curses will descend upon them. Moses reminds the people of the miracles in the wilderness and commands them to observe the covenant so they may succeed in all they do.

Selichot 8 pm

Torah Portion: Nitzavim-Vayeilech, Deuteronomy 29:9 – 31:30

Moses continues his farewell speech and God tells the people not to act idolatrously like other peoples. Moses reassures the people that God will not forsake them and that they can attain blessings by following the commandments.

Moses prepares the people for his death and announces that Joshua will succeed him. He instructs the priests and elders regarding the importance of the Torah. God informs Moses that upon his death, the people will commit idolatry and "many evils and troubles shall befall them." God tells Moses to teach the people a poem that will "be My witness."
